Bellamy Storer looks on from the opposite side of the fence while the President goes on making ambassadors.

George W. Pierce has been elected master of the Vermont state grange. It is needless to add that Mr. Pierce is from Brattleboro.

The weather man discloses a wonderful versatility in turning on the cold, the medium-cold and then the warm air valves in such quick succession.

The little city on the Otter creek, Vergennes, has long been known as the "ancient city." Its title is even more clear now that it has 81 residents above the three score years and ten limit.

Col. Charles H. Lewis, a former president of Norwich university, died in Camden, Maine, last week, and the news of his death will be received with great sorrow by the friends of the Northfield institution. Col. Lewis was at the head of the university for ten years. It has been written of him that "if it had not been for his aid in these trying times that the university would have been closed and our institution with her honorable record would have had only a past." Col. Lewis was an alumnus of Norwich, having been graduated in the class of 1855, one year behind Admiral Dewey. He went through the Civil war with honor and in 1880 came to the presidency of the military college in the neighboring town. Ten of the best years of his life he then gave to that work. Norwich men owe a deep debt to Col. Lewis.

The destruction of the forests of the United States is called sharply to the attention of Congress by the New York Sun in the following words: "Within the last ten years we have exported about $500,000,000 worth of forest products. The greater part of this was shipped in the form of lumber. Such trade is of more than doubtful advantage to the country. It is true that our exports are only about 10 per cent of our total cut, but that 10 per cent is needed right here at home. The total value of our lumber and timber products in 1900, the latest census year, was $968,000,000. It is probable that it is now largely in excess of that amount. At the present pace our timber resources will soon be exhausted, and we shall have no wood for export and only a limited and costly supply for domestic use." As a remedy the Sun suggests the treatment proposed by the Earl of Belmont, governor of New York in 1700, who stated that everyone who cuts down a tree should be compelled to plant five or six young trees to keep up the forest growth. It is with a realization of the above conditions that the Vermont forestry commission and those who look into the future desire to do everything possible for the preservation of even the Christmas trees of the state.

SUMMER HOTEL LIQUOR LICENSES.

Considering that the entire local option principle might have been jeopardized by the passage of an act to enable hotels in no-license towns to secure the right to sell liquor under a special authorization, the Vermont legislature did the wise thing in killing a bill of that nature yesterday. Although four years in force, the local option idea cannot be tampered with to any extent without running the chances of ultimate disruption of it. To have passed the hotel license bill as projected would have been to subvert the idea of local option. When towns vote "No" on the general licensing of liquor places, it means of course that a majority of the voters of the towns desire that the sale of liquor be not conducted. It would be contradictory if, subsequently, the town should vote to grant special privileges of sale to a particular person through the pro-

Her Christmas Wreath.
"I would not wear the laurel," said the dear, coquettish maid.
"For at the pathway leading unto fame I am afraid;
The cedar is too somber, and the holly is too gay;
I will not wear the willow, and I cannot wear the bay;
The rose is out of season and the lily, too, and so
I think on Christmas eve I'll wear a wreath of mistletoe."

Man in the Other Corner (crossly)—Yes, but you have omitted to remark the strange fact that the rain is coming down instead of going up, as usual.
—London Tit-Bits.

Wise John.
Said a youngster whose name was John Hurd.
"It has frequently to me occurred
That my parents so keen
Might have named me John Seen.
For a child should be seen and not heard."

BAD SPILL AT RACES.

Nearly Brought Six-Day Contest to a Close.
New York, Dec. 11.—The worst spill of the six day bicycle race bade fair to end the contest shortly after 7:30 this morning. Following terrific spurs, Hollister, slowing down to be relieved, was struck by Folger and eight other riders crashed into them. Both men were picked up unconscious and for a time Hollister was thought to be dead. The race was finally resumed at 9 o'clock, with all 18 teams represented. The injuries to Hollister and Folger turned out to be less severe than at first believed.
